Subject: Evaluation and Recommendation

At the Health Centre Postojna, we installed three Wellan units in our internal water distribution system on 6 July 2022: one on the main supply line and one each for the left and right wings of the building.

Approximately five months after the installation, we observed an increased release of deposits and corrosion residues from the pipework, which required more frequent cleaning of individual water outlets. We considered this to be a natural consequence of the cleaning process, as older deposits were being removed from the pipes.

After this phase, the situation stabilized completely. Today, we can confirm that the internal pipe network is in excellent condition. Problems caused by deposits no longer occur. The pipes remain clean—as if they were new.

We would particularly like to highlight the performance of the technical installations. Problems with boilers, hot water generation, or other related mechanical components are virtually unknown to us. Since the system stabilized, we have not experienced a single issue related to scaling, reduced efficiency, or increased maintenance requirements. The building is heated via district heating, so any loss of efficiency or additional strain on the system would be noticed immediately. However, no such effects have occurred. The entire water distribution system operates reliably and consistently.

The microbiological safety of the water is also of great importance for both user safety and the management of our healthcare facility. Since the installation of the Wellan system, we have not encountered a single case of Legionella.

After more than four years of operation, we can state that we are highly satisfied with the performance of the Wellan system.

The solution has made a significant contribution to the excellent operation of our water distribution network and technical installations, as well as to outstanding water quality. It has virtually eliminated the need for maintenance interventions on the water supply system.

We recommend the system without reservation.
